WHAT IS WINDOWS TO INFINITY?

Windows to Infinity is an original creative universe built upon proprietary intellectual property, bringing together a collection of stories, characters, and worlds conceived to stir emotions, spark the imagination, and convey universal values.

Its purpose is to create stories capable of inspiring people of all ages, fostering respect for people, culture, heritage, nature, and the planet.

The universe is organized into four major collections:

Original Characters: characters created specifically for Windows to Infinity.

Original Stories: completely original stories and worlds.

Historical Collection: stories inspired by history and cultural heritage.

Nature Collection: stories inspired by nature, biodiversity and preservation.

Each collection possesses its own unique identity, but they all share the same vision: to create memorable stories that inspire, move, and spark curiosity in future generations.

WINDOWS TO INFINITY: THE EXHIBITION

Windows to Infinity: The Exhibition is an immersive, family-friendly exhibition that transforms the original creative universe of Windows to Infinity into an artistic, educational, and emotional experience where the visitor is no longer a mere spectator but an explorer.

Each journey combines massive, monumental dioramas, original worlds, and characters, artists at work, creative workshops, virtual and augmented reality, multimedia, music, storytelling, audio guides, scale models, special effects, interactive spaces, and digital content that turn every visit into a unique experience.

In addition to showcasing artworks, the exhibition invites visitors to discover how worlds are born, how their characters are built, and how art, imagination, and technology can come together to move, inspire, and educate—and to spark creativity in people of all ages.

Windows to Infinity: The Exhibition is the gateway to a universe where every experience is an invitation to look, feel, learn, and create.

ADDED VALUE

Windows to Infinity is neither a conventional exhibition nor a collection of independent attractions. It's an original creative universe developed entirely by a single team, from the initial idea to the final visitor experience.

We are the creators of this universe, the designers of its worlds, the authors of its stories, the artists who bring its works to life, and the team that manufactures, installs, operates, and evolves every project. This integration is the key to offering an authentic, consistent and constantly growing experience.

Unlike any other offering, visitors discover art created by the artists themselves, watch them work live, participate in workshops inspired by real artistic processes, and experience a journey where grand dioramas, special effects, immersive experiences, technology, and creativity all come together.

Windows to Infinity is a modular, scalable creative universe designed to grow with new worlds, characters, and experiences.

WTI

OUR PHILOSOPHY

Our approach combines craftsmanship with technological innovation to create experiences where art always takes center stage. From the initial sketch to the final installation, every project stems from a creative vision developed entirely by our own team.

We believe that technology should not replace art, but rather enhance it. Virtual reality, augmented reality, special effects, immersive projections, and digital tools are some of the resources we use to amplify emotion, enrich the narrative, and bring each story closer to the visitor in a more intense and memorable way.

Every world, character, and experience is born with a purpose: to spark the imagination, convey values, and create an emotional bond that transcends the visit. We encourage creativity, culture, and respect for people, heritage, and the planet, since we truly believe that art is a universal language capable of uniting generations and cultures.

Our goal is not merely to surprise: it is to inspire, to move, and to leave a mark that remains alive long after leaving the exhibition.

*Art always comes first.
Technology enhances it,
never replaces it.*

THE TEAM BEHIND THE PROJECT

Windows to Infinity is much more than an exhibition. It's a project run by a team of creators that turn imagination into real experiences: the Innovators.

The Innovators are sculptors, illustrators, designers, 3D modelers, engineers, programmers, audiovisual specialists, virtual and augmented reality experts, production technicians, and professionals from multiple disciplines who work together to bring each project to life.

What makes this team unique is its involvement in all phases of the creative process. They imagine, design, develop, manufacture, install, and evolve each work, always maintaining the artistic essence and creative control of the universe Windows to Infinity.

More than just a group of professionals, the Innovators are a community of people passionate about art, creativity, and innovation, united by a shared goal: to create experiences capable of stirring emotions, inspiring, and leaving a lasting impression on those who experience them.

THE SOUL OF WINDOWS TO INFINITY

Notes from the author

Every great universe begins with a simple idea.

Where it all started

Letter sent by Lucía, sculptor and member of the creative team of Windows to Infinity, to Ramón Colomer, the creator of the project.

Amid the echoes of an old train station, your dream began.

There, where time stands still and light passes through the glass, you saw the endless corridor. Each window spoke to you with a different voice: seas, creatures, trains, entire worlds. You moved forward without fear, with the certainty that everything you imagined could exist. And when you awoke, the dream had a face, a form, a name: Windows to Infinity.

For from that moment a vision was born that no longer belongs only to you, but to all who look—and dream again.

The Endless Universe

Some dreams appear in an instant, while others need years to find their true form.

Windows to Infinity was born from a dream: to create a universe where art, imagination, and emotion merge to give life to worlds that can exist only beyond the limits of reality.

For more than six years, I have filled notebooks with ideas, sketched characters, imagined impossible landscapes, and built stories that, little by little, found their own soul. Creating has taught me that the true path lies in starting over again and again, without ever ceasing to believe.

Each window opens up a different story. Some speak of adventure, others of hope, beauty, or reflection, but they all share the same purpose: to stir the emotions. This is a universe with worlds of light and darkness, ancient civilizations, extraordinary creatures, and characters that invite the visitor to discover something about themselves.

Each work in this catalog is a fragment of that journey. It does not represent the end of a project, but rather the beginning of a universe that will continue to grow as long as there is a story to imagine.

Because Windows to Infinity is not something to be observed... it is something to be lived. And by opening each window, you also become part of the journey.

Reflections from Infinity

While shaping Windows to Infinity, I discovered that each work ended up asking me a question before offering me an answer.

I have never meant to create stories to tell anyone what they should think. I have always preferred to imagine worlds that invite one to pause, observe, and feel. Some speak of harmony with nature, others of the passage of time, of forgiveness, hope or the fragility of the human being.

Perhaps each visitor finds a different meaning. And that is precisely what I am most passionate about. When a work ceases to belong to its creator and begins to become part of the person contemplating it, art comes to life.

That has always been my greatest desire: for Windows to Infinity to not only be seen but also felt.

How my first character was born

Every character begins as a simple idea.

Sometimes it is a silhouette, a glance, or a gesture that appears almost without one realizing it. This is how Isabella was born.

From the very beginning, I was determined to create a character who embodied leadership, freedom, and the ability to blaze new trails. I wasn't looking for a hero who stood out solely for her bravery, but rather a woman capable of inspiring through her intelligence, her determination, and the way she faced any challenge.

Over time, it gradually transformed. Every sketch, every change of costume, pose, or expression helped me discover who she really was. More than designing a character, I felt like I was building a personality.

I never imagined Isabella merely as the star of an adventure. For me, she has always symbolized the courage to challenge established norms and demonstrate that true leadership is not a matter of gender, but of character, vision, and determination.

Her story also speaks of freedom: the freedom to explore new horizons, make decisions without fear, and shape one's own destiny without ever compromising who we are.

Over time, Isabella came to be one of the pillars upon which Windows to Infinity began to grow. Her evolution reminded me that great stories almost always spring from a simple idea... and the decision never to stop believing in it.

- 1 Initial idea

The first sketch captures the essence. A simple silhouette where Isabella's story begins.
- 2 First definition

Time for the first decisions. Attire, pose, and proportions begin to reveal her personality.
- 3 Emerging personality

Her identity grows stronger. Every detail conveys confidence, attitude, and a recognizable presence.
- 4 Established identity

The design finds balance. Attire, silhouette, and expression define the true captain.
- 5 Soul revealed

The final touches bring the character to life. Its strength, elegance, and adventurous spirit are defined.
- 6 Isabella

The character is ready to live her own stories. The legendary captain comes to life.

When imagination took another form

The birth of Vulkron

I thought that The Final Countdown was ready.

The story worked, the characters were established, and the composition convinced me. To me, the world was complete.

But every time I looked at it, I felt something was missing. I couldn't tell what it was. It was simply that feeling which, as an artist, tells you that the work has not yet had the final word.

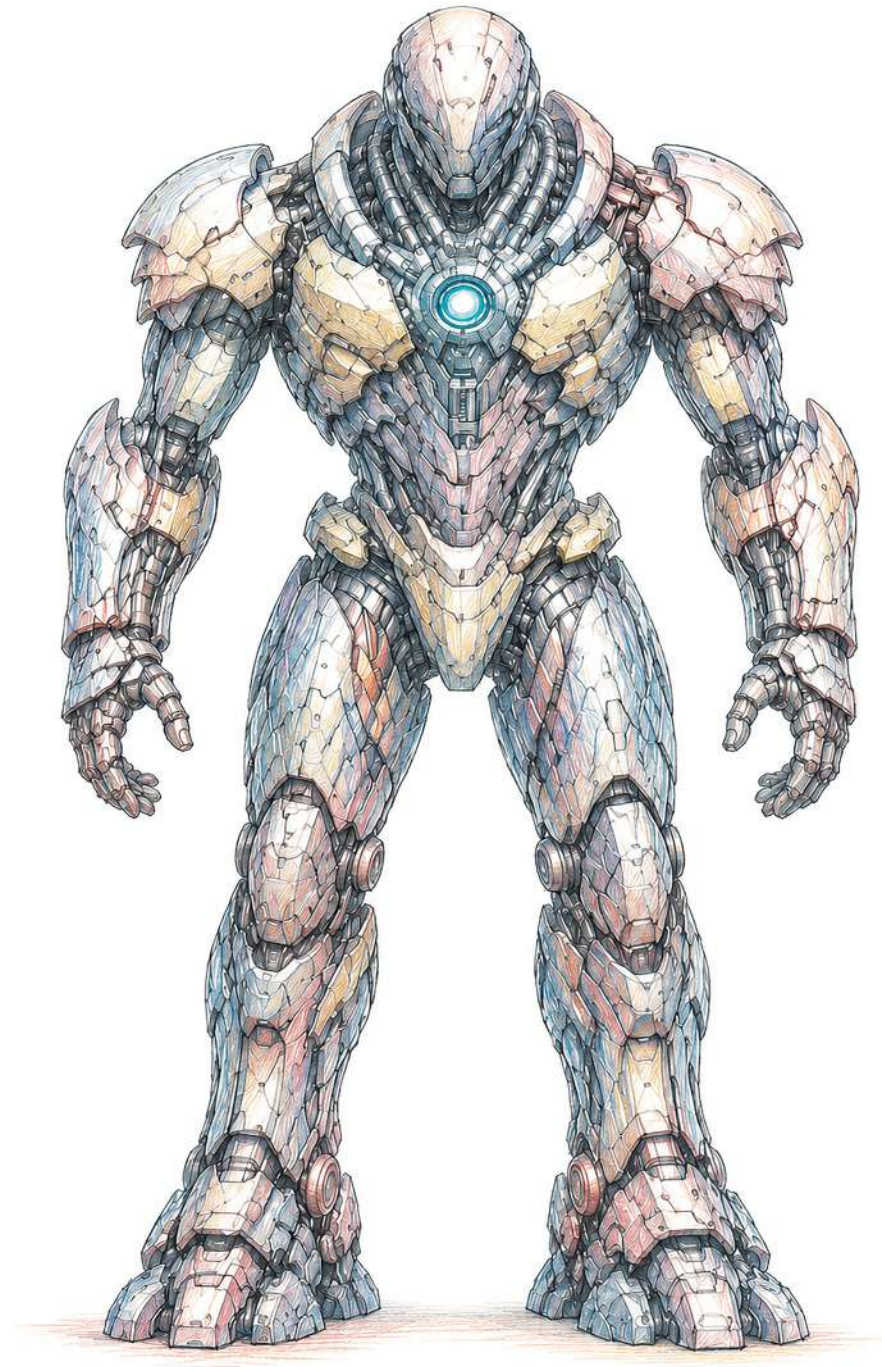

And then Vulkron appeared.

It ended up becoming the most important piece of the entire scene. His gigantic figure opens up the immense crater that cuts across the city and completely transforms the visual impact of the work.

This is what creation means.

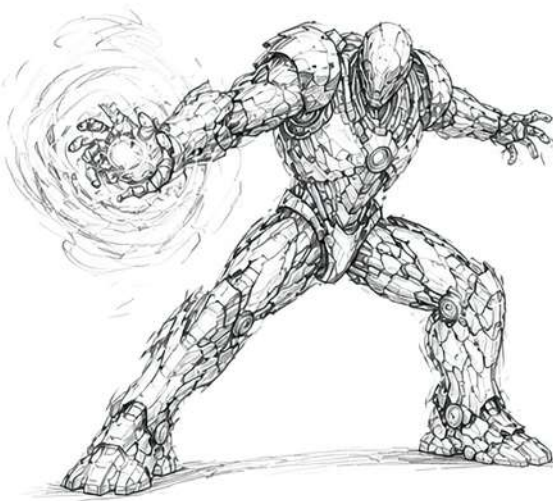

You think you're finished, but a new idea forces you to go back, modify characters, rework scenes, and start all over again.

“You never stop building a world; there simply comes a moment when you decide it is time to share it with others.”

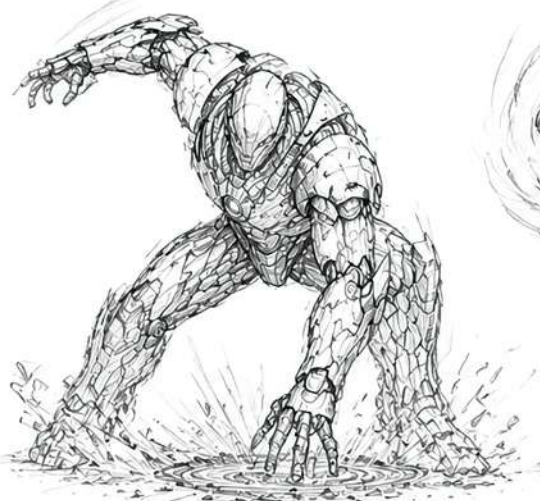

Igneous Core

He concentrates the energy from its core to generate a sphere of power capable of altering everything around it.

Seismic Impact

He strikes the ground with tremendous force, creating a shockwave that shakes the terrain.

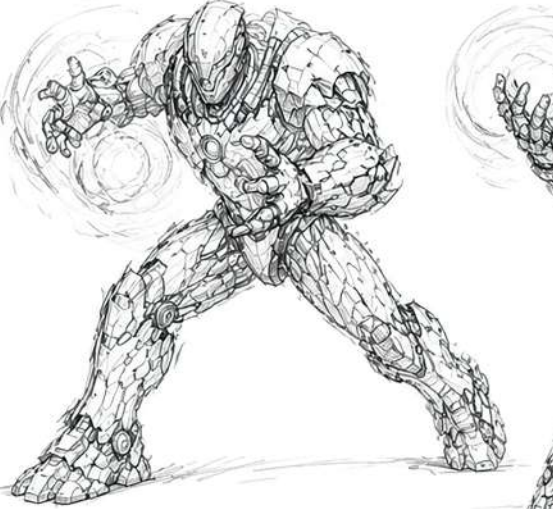

Plasma Storm

Channels energy into both hands before releasing it in a powerful discharge.

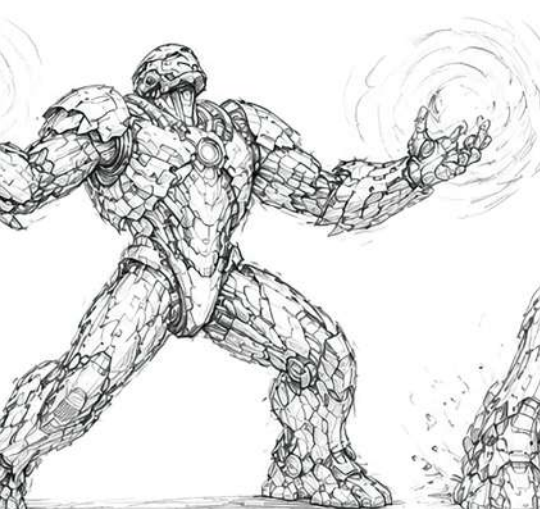

Titan's Charge

It advances unstoppably, knocking down any obstacle in its path.

Final Awakening

When all his energy is concentrated in the central core, Vulkron reaches his maximum power and unleashes a devastating attack.

Colossus Mode

His gigantic structure reaches peak strength, turning it into a practically unstoppable monster.

The Souls of Infinity

Energies, symbols and presences

While creating Windows to Infinity, I realized that a universe cannot be sustained solely by characters or stories. It needs something deeper, something invisible that gives it meaning and keeps its essence alive.

Thus were born the energies, symbols, and presences that inhabit this universe: the Living Light of Etheria, Maelia Lumina, the ancient guardians, and all those forces representing hope, memory, imagination, balance, and the passage of time.

I did not conceive of them as mere elements of a story, but rather as the soul that connects all worlds and reminds us that, however different they may seem, they all spring from the same place: emotion.

Because I have always believed that a universe is not built solely with characters; it also needs a soul to keep it alive.

Messages and Values

Art as Consciousness

During the creative process of Windows to Infinity, I never set out to write messages. They simply appeared, as if the works themselves wanted to reveal what they held within.

Each world, each character, and each story has left me with a reflection on what I consider truly important: compassion, respect, freedom, memory, and a love for life.

I didn't add these values at the end. They were born alongside each creation. They are the invisible thread connecting this entire universe, and the reason why I want every work to move, inspire, and invite reflection.

That is why I imagined Maelia Lumina as her guardian. More than simply guiding the visitor through our worlds, she safeguards the values that inhabit each story, ensuring they never lose their true meaning.

Because I have always believed that art, when born from the heart, is not limited to decorating the world.

If a single glance changes after contemplating a work of art, art has already fulfilled its mission.

My Vision

For more than four decades, I have devoted my life to imagining, drawing, and creating worlds that do not exist but that, in some way, I have always felt to be very real.

I never thought of art as a simple representation of reality. For me, creating means going a step further: building places where imagination, emotion, and beauty can meet to awaken something in the beholder.

This is how Windows to Infinity was born. What began as an idea, some sketches, and a personal dream has ended up becoming a shared universe. Today, I am blessed with an extraordinary team of sculptors, designers, technicians, and creators working with me to continue bringing this project to life and helping it grow every day.

Together, we share the same vision of art: not as an end in itself, but as a language capable of stirring emotions, inspiring, and creating memories that linger long after the experience has ended.

This has always been my true purpose. Not to create an exhibition, but a universe capable of making those who choose to step through one of its windows dream.

“Art does not end in what we see. It begins in what we feel.”

Our Values

At Windows to Infinity, we believe that art has the power to inspire, connect people, and evoke emotions that transcend cultures, generations, and borders. For this reason, we view each project as an opportunity to bring culture closer to new audiences, transforming it into an experience that is accessible, exciting, and capable of leaving a lasting impression on those who experience it.

We also make a firm commitment to sustainability, opting for reusable structures, recycled materials, and responsible solutions that allow us to minimize environmental impact without compromising quality or creativity.

We believe in the power of imagination as a driving force for change. We seek to spark curiosity, foster creativity, and create experiences that leave long-lasting memories after the visit has ended.

Furthermore, we view creation as knowledge that must be shared. For this reason, we showcase our processes, open the doors to our workshops, and bring our artists' work closer to the public, with the aim of inspiring new vocations and contributing to the training of future generations.

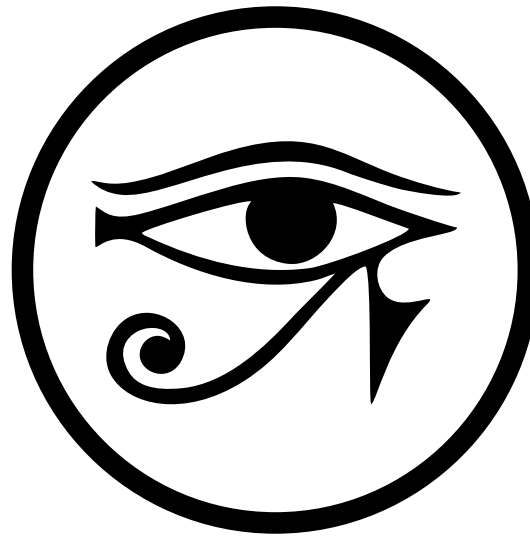

Because for us, art is not merely a form of expression.

It is also a tool for learning, sharing, inspiring, and building a better future.

*If there is a city that looks to the future with hope, Windows to Infinity will invite it to dream.
We bring stories, light, and creativity to every corner of the world, building bridges between imagination and reality.*
